

教員紹介／Teaching Staff

職位／Title	氏名／Name	学位／Education	研究内容／Research
Professor	OGAWA Kazuhisa	Master of Arts and Science	Evaluation of an educational program on children's hazard perception. Methods of providing elderly drivers with feedback for self-reflection. Negative emotions and self-control examined according to the driver's age.
Professor	KATAYAMA Fumio	Doctor of Laws	My research focuses on the history of political thought and political theory. In particular, I study Benjamin Franklin, Thomas Paine, and others during the American founding period, focusing on the relationship between religious, economic and political thought. I am also interested in American conservatism and common sense thought in the Atlantic Rim network since the 17th century.
Professor	KATO Junichi	Bachelor of Arts	While considering what it means to nurture people, I am researching the qualities and abilities required of teachers from various angles, focusing on the ideal way of training teachers.
Professor	SUZUKI Jun	Doctor of Literature	It is often said that Victorian literature contributed much to imperialism. However, as Edward Said argues, critics should also focus on the hidden, resistant voices of the natives. Thus, I am currently reconsidering the complicit relationship from a postcolonial perspective.
Professor	TAKANO Atsushi	Doctor of Philosophy	I am interested in how elite athletes make decisions during a match. Also, I want to investigate the differences in brain activity between elites and normal athletes.
Professor	TAKAHASHI Shutaro	Doctor of Literature	Study of modern Japanese literature and culture, especially early Showa era/ Study of Dazai Osamu's literature
Professor	TAKAHASHI Tetsunori	Master of Arts	My research aims at analyzing the rhetorical aspects of the American Novel and Literary Criticism in the 20th century, especially focusing on aesthetic and theoretical possibilities and limits of irony in the major works from Modernism to Postmodernism, from the New Criticism to the New Historicism.
Associate Professor	OKI Yoko	Doctor of Literature	I study modern Japanese literature, especially Japanese children's literature. My main research interests are the history of Japanese children's literature, magazine studies, and the relationship between children's literature and contemporary literature.
Associate Professor	Simon D. Cooke	Doctor of Information Sciences	The focus of my research is to examine ways in which students can become more effective autonomous learners. Rather than relying solely on classroom-based teacher-led instruction, autonomous learning promotes the development of a collaborative classroom environment and the discovery of learning methods that can help students to learn for themselves.
Associate Professor	NAKAJIMA Natsuko	Master of Education	The major field of my study is college curriculum. Japanese policy on college curriculum has been deregulated its national standards, which lead universities to organize their own curriculum. Therefore, the purpose of my study is to find out new principles and frameworks for the curriculum in the new era.
Associate Professor	HONDA Haruhiko	Doctor of Philosophy	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> ・ My recent research is to clarify the effect of physical activity of elderly people on physical and mental health. I have examined this theme through an intervention program. ・ Another area of my research is to enhance the QOL of people with disabilities through sports and exercise.
Lecturer	KAWACHI Satoko	Doctor of Literature	Research on the spread and acceptance of media in the modern Japanese community. Mainly, we consider popular media such as magazines from the standpoint of literary research.